NEW ZEALAND IMPOSTORS - by Peter Collins

Considering its Classic stamps and the value of many of its issues, New Zealand philately is remarkably free of forgery, and all the "album weeds" that have appeared are well documented. It is a well known fact that early advocates of the use of the postage stamps, fearing a loss of revenue through forgery, considered that forging a reproduction of a human portrait would be most difficult to achieve without some difference from the original springing immediately to the eye and this was the reason that Queen Victoria's head was selected for the first stamp design instead of one of the myriad of other complicated patterns submitted. The early planners' ideas were based on sound reason, and that is why forgeries of the Chalon Heads are so readily spotted. Occasionally forgeries are seen of these stamps. They usually crop up in collections where some specialist has obviously spent much time and trouble in acquiring forged material. Excepting the Jeffery Forgery, these "stamps" often appear Germanic in origin, but always some aspect of the features gives away without a second examination, the fact that these goods have not come from the same masterly engraver's hand as our Humphrys' Chalons.

Far more dangerous to the philatelist, are repaired Chalons. Ultra violet lamps are said to be a boon in detecting repairs, but keeneyes, a good glass and experience are equally the requirements of the expert. Examine the face of the stamp at the corners, the sides, the top and the bottom. Look for any slight variation in shade, a waver in a frame line that should be straight, some irregularity in the design that should not be there. Any or all of these features could indicate painting in of a part of the design where the paper has been repaired, so turn the stamp over and the chances are that at the suspect area, you will detect some difference in the texture of the paper. The mesh may go the wrong way, the paper texture may vary, the colour of the paper may change (perhaps whiter or creamier than the rest of the stamp). These repairers were clever chaps. They knew their job. Working with pulp, or perhaps, for all we know perfecting their own secret methods, they built up margins and grafted on corners, but all nevertheless, left tell tale traces of their work which the philatelist with knowledge and experience can always detect.

Experience has shown that the forger was always careless, ignorant, or perhaps just too greedy to pay attention to detail, and time and again he gives himself away by boobs that a thoughtful collector, treating everything as doubtful till it's prooved all right, will easily observe and interpret.

The High Values of the Sidefaces and First Pictorial issues (1/-,2/- and 5/-) are all too frequently seen with pen and ink cancellations removed, and datestamps applied to turn them into apparently postally used copies. Again, ultra violet lamps will show up cleaned cancellations, but people sometimes prefer to think they have an unrecorded rarity in their collection than to use their common sense and philatelic knowledge to deduce what the faker did not know. Some years ago we were shown a 5/Mt. Cook perf 11. It could not have been issued before 1903 according to the records, yet this copy was plainly postmarked 1900. A rare and mysterious item -till the cleaned pen and ink cancellation was seen. The faker in this case had cleaned off the fiscal marking, then learning from his catalogue that a stamp in this design had first appeared in 1898, had arranged to have a postmark dated 1900 impressed on his specimen, not realising that he had ante-dated the perf 11 issue by three years

Some of the trickier items among the perforated Chalons, the Sidefaces, First Pictorials, and right through to the Mt. Cooks and Penny Universals are forgeries of perforations either to produce rare combinations of mixed perfs. or compound perfs or simply double perfs.

A pretty elementary point that is easily overlooked, is that genuine perforation varieties are well recorded, so measure your "rarity" carefully. The measurement should conform exactly with what it's meant to be. If it don't - it's fishy.

Have you noticed that when you tear perfs, the edges are jagged where the fibres have been ruptured, and this is a factor to look for. Perfs that are obviously cut and not torn are suspicious. Finally you know, perfs are usually round and neat, not square cut and ugly. The perf 11 and 14 machines in the first decade of this century produced very rough jagged perfs when they became old and worn, but they are easily recognised, and the three "howlers" which perforation forgers committed are summed up as Perfs which do not conform with any recognised genuine measurement, Perfs which are cut instead of being pulled and the Square Cut Perfs.

Imperf varieties should cause little trouble, it is unusual to find perforated Chalons which have been trimmed to produce the scarcer earlier imperforate stamps in similar values and colours. This is mainly because the gutter between stamps were not originally intended to be perforated (except only in the 4d and printings from Plate 2 of the 2d), and consequently, perforated stamps seldom had sufficient margin to permit them to be trimmed to fake imperforates. It is later issues where the "imperf" or "imperf vertically or horizontally" varieties could have been faked, and consequently it is advisable to accept such varieties only in pair or larger multiple.

The Penny Universal is a favourite for faking up into an imperf variety - supposedly from the experimental coils The "Booklet" stamp lends itself most admirably to such (mal) treatment because it is often found imperf on two sides, but the fake is easily spotted. Remember the enormous redrawn top pearl, the Four o'clock Flaw, and the strong central pearl at the left of Booklet Pane Stamps. Imperf items from machines are always of Dot or Reserve Plate stamps.

Misidentified stamps are far more frequent impostors than fakes or forgeries. In the Penny Universal series Cowan No Watermark and Basted Mills papers are often confused one with the other so that the commoner perfs in one paper masquerade as rarer items in the other. Of course the most certain way to distinguish these stamps is that the Basted Mills paper with an almost invisible watermark always has vertical mesh, while the Cowan (rare with mixed or compound perfs) has horizontal.

In more recent issues, what about the $1\frac{1}{2}d$ Maori Cooking "Official" on paper with single watermark (C. P. LO3a, S. G. O116a).! After an article appeared in the public philatelic press lately stating that only four existed, a General Collector wrote to us in some indignation suggesting that we should get our facts right before we went into print as he knew of the existence of several copies and had heard of one which had a Certificate. Now it so happened that we had seen the stamp to which our correspondent referred, and although it appeared to have only one watermark plumb in the middle of the stamp, the mesh was quite distinctly horizontal and so the stamp simply could not have single watermark.

The moral to this series of anecdotes seems to be that if you know your stamps thoroughly and think straight, no forgery can deceive you - or if you have not the background and experience to make judgement for yourself seek the advice of the experts, or at least ensure that you deal only with the expert who will give a money-back guarantee if your buy should prove to be a fiscal a phoney or a fraud.

1967 DECIMALS

Tailor made collections of varieties offered page by page have always been popular. We supply the stamps in envelopes clearly marked ready for you to mount in your album and suggest in our write up how these items may be displayed as a very attractive collection of one issue. In this way, we do the thinking; you have the fun of seeing your collection take shape as you mount it up value by value. All stamps are mint unless stated.

A striking selection with a mint block of four, imprint and plate blocks (1A and 1B)., two booklet, panes of six stamps, one with plain selvedge, one showing plate number XA or XB (as available) and booklet panes of five stamps plus a label, one with plain selvedge, one with plate number, and finally a variety block including the R 11/10 retouch by "N". Altogether 9 blocks
Page 3	2 cent Kaka Beak. Some of these collections really run to more than one page! Firstly there is a block of four, then an imprint block, followed by plate blocks 1A and 1B and plate blocks showing the use of a new green cylinder 2A, 2B (R20/8 and 20/9 show extensive flaws in plate 2A). A marginal block of four includes R11/10 "Teardrop under E of NEW", and a block of 16 includes R17/4, R19/2 and R20/1 with prominent retouching or flaws on the stamps. The 8 blocks as described

The $7\frac{1}{2}$ cent appeared with upright wmk and sideways wmk, and two different perforating heads were used, so these stamps are represented by two blocks of four (one from each type) showing clearly the difference in the perforations, plus a block of six showing the constant R 10/13 variety "Flaw below Fin". Of the 8 cent Flag there is an Imprint/Plate Block, and a marginal block of four which includes the clear retouch between Z and E on R12/1. Seven Blocks

The above pages make up into a collection which does not present uniformity in each value, but provides an interesting mixed lot representative of various features to be found with this series. Most of the individual varieties mentioned can be supplied singly, each "page" may be ordered separately, or we will supply the complete collection (pages 1 to 18) at an inclusive price of f_{ψ} \(\int \)

NEW ZEALAND PHILATELIC LITERATURE

All these handbooks are good. They are good because they include detailed information which cannot be found elsewhere; information of inestimable value to the student of New Zealand stamps, to the philatelist who wants to extend his interest and broaden his knowledge. They can also be recommended as an investment. Further copies will not become available, but demand will continually increase.
